Chinese medicine includes acupuncture, herbology and nutritional guidance. At Heritage, we also frequently recommend stretches and therapeutic movements for pain conditions. These recommendations can be important to hold the results of acupuncture treatment. In some cases, acupuncture is the primary treatment method for specific conditions. In other cases, herbology is essential for treatment, while acupuncture is more auxiliary. How willing are you to follow the recommendations of your practitioner once they have explained what is needed to help you heal with Chinese medicine?

I will follow my practitioner's recommendations

I am open to treatment options in Chinese medicine but would like more information

I only want to have treatments with acupuncture

The clinic is often booked out from 1 to 3 weeks. How soon do you need an initial appointment?

Ideally in the next 2 weeks

This week; immediately

I can wait 3-4 weeks

No rush; some time in the next 1-2 months
